Katie Iles speaks about:

GEN Z DEFINED: 5 KEY CHARACTERISTICS OF THIS GLOBAL GENERATION

For Generation Z (born 1995-2009), a world of Wi-Fi is the only one they have ever known. Digital is their default, Siri is their personal assistant and with billions of Google searches every day, access to any piece of information is only ever seconds away. They are digital linguists, social networkers, global collaborators and sensory engagers. In this session, Katie will unpack 5 key characteristics of this emerging generation, and equip you with keys to better understand, engage and work with the generation who are the most formally educated, technologically literate and materially endowed generation in history.

NEXT GEN LEADERSHIP: CREATING AN ENGAGING CULTURE, BUILDING MULTIGENERATIONAL TEAMS

In a little over a generation, organisations have been transformed from hierarchical structures to collaborative environments. Staff and volunteers have moved from long term commitment to valuing variety and frequent change. It is imperative that leaders are equipped with strategies to build a culture which attracts and inspires, implement leadership which supports and empowers and shapes an organisational climate which produces both productivity and engagement. In this session, Katie will unpack key leadership qualities that emerging generations resonate with, and equip leaders, managers and teams to attract, engage and retain talent across a multi-generational workforce.

EDUCATING SCREENAGERS: PEDAGOGICAL IMPLICATIONS FOR TODAY'S LEARNERS

The rapid acceleration of technological advancements and the increased integration of digital devices into our lives has demanded that pedagogical approaches adapt and change to facilitate most effective learning for Gen Z, the Screenagers. For a generation who 'just Google it' and have Siri as their homework companion, educators are at the forefront of needing to respond to the changes as the emerging generations redefine working, learning and community. From sensory engagers to digital linguists and social networkers, this session will deliver insights from the latest research on characteristics defining Gen Z. Katie's session will also unpack implications for the education sector, from flipped learning to virtual libraries and connected classrooms.

Client testimonials

“ Katie did an amazing job and was really lovely and easy to work with. Katie was a great surprise to many, her presentation was so insightful and enjoyable, she was a delight on stage. So many attendees genuinely connected with her explanation of Post-Millennials and how to work with them as colleagues and clients. Personally, Katie's presentation was my highlight of the day.
