Radio Broadcaster, Author, MC, Keynote Speaker

A radio broadcaster, author and facilitator, Lisa Leong is curious and creative.

A former Intellectual Property, Technology and Wine lawyer (yes, there is such a thing!), Lisa caught the radio bug in 2001. She was accepted into the Australian Film Television and Radio School, where she picked up a radio degree. She did a stint on commercial radio stations on the Gold Coast and Adelaide, before joining the ABC presenting the breakfast show for the Eyre Peninsula in South Australia. After the birth of her daughter, Lisa returned to her hometown Melbourne.

Lisa draws on her unique career experiences combined with Design Thinking and mindfulness practices to bring a fresh approach to conversations and connection. Her work has been the subject of a Harvard Law case study, received numerous awards, and inspired Lisa's TEDx Melbourne talk "Can robots make us more human?"

Lisa presents Sundays on ABC Radio Melbourne and hosts This Working Life on ABC Radio National. She has co-authored with Monique Ross the book This Working Life: How to Navigate Your Career in Uncertain Times.

Lisa is a graduate of the Customer-Focused Innovation program of Stanford University's GSB and the Stanford d.school, the Australian Film Television & Radio School, and the University of Melbourne Law School.
